About Social Thinking

Our mission is to help people develop social competencies to better connect with others and live happier, more meaningful lives. We do this by creating concepts, curricula, and materials that serve two purposes:

1. To break down and organize abstract social concepts to educate professionals and family members on how to teach social competencies.
2. To help individuals age 4 through adulthood improve their social competencies to meet their personal, academic, and professional goals. Along the way, we teach how to share space effectively, work as part of a team, and develop relationships—with family, friends, classmates, coworkers, romantic partners, etc.

Who We Help

While our deeper work is for individuals age 4+ with solid learning and language skills (Asperger's syndrome, ASD levels 1 & 2, ADHD, and other social communication challenges), a subset of our work is being adopted into mainstream classrooms and workplaces around the world to improve social-emotional competencies for all.

Who Should Attend?

In short—anyone who wants to help those with solid learning and language skills improve social competencies: speech-language pathologists, special and general education teachers, social workers, counselors, school and clinical psychologists, family members and caregivers, occupational therapists, behavior specialists, and school administrators, to name a few.

The Social Thinking Methodology builds:

- social competencies
- social self-awareness
- perspective taking
- self-regulation
- executive functioning
- social skills
- social-emotional understanding
- organizational systems
- reading comprehension of literature
- written expression, and more...

Conference Schedule

Thursday, September 27*Zooming In: Strategies for Concrete Learners | ages 5 - young adult

Michelle Garcia Winner & Pamela Crooke

Using video from treatment sessions, we zoom in on strategies to promote social attention and perspective taking (theory of mind) with students who interpret language very literally and struggle to interpret what others think and feel. These more literal-minded students—who may have a diagnosis of high-functioning autism, ADHD, ASD, and/or sensory integration challenges—are slow to learn social skills and exhibit a range of other learning challenges related to their weak socially based critical thinking. Video-based case studies will guide how this type of student evolves in their understanding of the social world as they grow up to help illuminate treatment ideas. Audience members will receive checklists to help differentiate types of social learners and how social learning connects to the educational standards. Group treatment ideas for different age groups will also be introduced. Audience members appreciate the practical information shared across the day!

Friday, September 28*Zooming In: Strategies for Individuals with Subtle but Significant Social Problems

ages 5 - young adult

Michelle Garcia Winner & Pamela Crooke

Explore the needs of nuance-challenged social communicators who may have diagnoses such as Asperger's syndrome, ASD, ADHD, and social anxiety as well as traits such as perfectionism, being oppositional, etc. Usually in mainstream classes, these individuals struggle with the intricacies of developing social relationships, working through assignments, and engaging in peer-based groups. Learn how even a slight impairment in flexible thinking, emotional understanding of self and others, problem solving, self-advocacy, and nuanced social interpretations can contribute to subtle but significant social challenges. Explore related treatment strategies while also learning tips to motivate students to participate in treatment activities encouraging development of executive functioning, perspective taking, and emotion management!
